Plagiarism / Use of automatically generated text

With your signature you confirm that you have been informed that plagiarism is forbidden. Please inform yourself on plagiarism on relevant websites. The use of automatically generated text is allowed if the "Guidelines on the Use of Text Generation Models for Seminar Papers and Theses" from the Department of Computational Linguistics are followed.

Formal Conditions

The final thesis is a written work on a topic to be independently written by the students.

- Supervisors have to have at least a Master's degree to be entitled to supervise a Bachelor's thesis.
- Supervisors have to have at least a doctorate to be entitled to supervise a Master's thesis.

Group work is not permitted. The final thesis is booked by the students via the module booking tool. The legal basis can be found in the "Framework Regulations for Studies in the Bachelor's and Master's Programmes at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences of the University of Zurich": <http://www.phil.uzh.ch/de/studium/rechtsgrundlagen.html>. Information on the degree can be found at <https://www.phil.uzh.ch/en/studium/studentenservices/abschluss.html>.

Copyright and Rights of Use

According to current law, the copyrights for the final thesis are held by the student. However, students must grant the University of Zurich, represented by the Department of Computational Linguistics, a free, perpetual, non-exclusive right to use the thesis (in particular for publication on the web) and all artifacts (in particular software) created in the course of the thesis. In exceptional cases, this rule may be deviated from by mutual agreement.

I grant the Department of Computational Linguistics of the University of Zurich a free, perpetual, non-exclusive license to use the thesis and all artifacts (especially software) created in the course of the thesis.
